ARMY INSTITUTE OF FASHION & DESIGN, BANGALORE

“The customer is the final filter. What survives the whole process is what people wear. I’m not interested in making clothes that end up in some dusty museum.”

— Marc Jacobs, head designer, Marc Jacobs

As Marc Jacobs clearly states, Fashion has become entirely customer centric. Fashion Designers can educate the customer about style and taste, while inspiring retailers with new ideas to drive the market. A fashion designer is someone who loves to study fashion trends, sketch designs, select materials, and play a role in all the production aspects of their designs. Designers contribute to the economy of the country with millions of pieces of clothing and accessories purchased by consumers on a yearly basis. Hence Fashion Design is a lucrative and creatively satisfying career.

3. FASHION DESIGN AS A CAREER

3.1 Why Study Fashion Designing?

Fashion Design is THE career of the future. With the internet and social media invading everyday lives, fashion has become a global phenomenon; constantly changing and evolving. It requires special people with ingenuity, creativity and will to design. Good training is absolutely imperative for one to create designer apparel that is truly unique.

Fashion is not just designing and creating clothes, there are several career choices affiliated to this field. Other popular job opportunities are in the fields of Visual Merchandising, Retail Management, Content Writing, Fashion Styling, Fashion Consulting, Production Coordinators and Customer Care Associates. The courses are programmed to provide students from diverse backgrounds a professional and hands-on training in Fashion Designing and related technical subjects, for their recognition in the international scenario along with huge growth prospects in the domestic industry. Our Fashion Designing Program attempts to inculcate visual and aesthetic sensitivity by understanding values that embody fashion. The EMPHASIS is placed on Professionalism, Specialization, Expertise and Design Excellence to create FASHION PROFESSIONALS.

3.2 How does a fashion designer work?

Fashion designers can work in a number of ways. They may work for a Fashion House or Retail Industry, where they are known as in-house designers. They may work alone or as part of a team. Freelance designers work for themselves, and sell their designs to fashion houses, directly to shops, or to clothing manufacturers. The garments bear the buyers label. Some fashion designers are entrepreneurs and set up their own labels, under which their designs are marketed. Some fashion designers are self-employed and design for individual clients. Other high-fashion designers cater to specialty stores or high-fashion department stores. Most fashion designers, however, work for apparel manufacturers, creating designs for the mass market, like Trends, Lifestyle and Pantaloons. Large designer brands which have a 'name' as their brand such as Manish Arora, Sabyasachi, Rajesh Pratap Singh, or Ritu Kumar are likely to be designed by a team of individual designers under the direction of a design director.

3.3 Designing a Collection

A fashion collection is something that designers put together each season (or Fashion week) to show their idea of new trends in both their high end couture range as well as their mass market range.

3.4 Designing Garments

Fashion designers work in different ways. Some sketch their ideas on paper, while others drape fabric on a dress form. It is only when a designer is completely satisfied with the fit of the toile (or muslin), that he or she will consult a professional pattern maker who then makes the finished, working version of the pattern. The pattern maker's job is very precise and painstaking. The fit of the finished garment depends on their accuracy. Finally, a sample garment is made and tested on a model.

3.5 Types of Fashion

There are several categories of fashion design, mostly positioned according to their price points or brand image.

3.6 Haute Couture

Until the 1950s, fashion clothing was predominantly designed and manufactured on a made-to-measure or haute couture basis (French for high-fashion), with the garment being created for a specific client. A couture garment is made to order for an individual customer, and is usually made from high-quality, expensive fabric, sewn with extreme attention to detail and finish, often using time-consuming, hand-executed techniques. Designers and Design Houses like Giorgio Armani and Christian Dior create both couture and designer clothes.

3.7 Ready-to-Wear

Prêt or ready-to-wear clothes refer to clothes that are available in high street or up market stores. The customer can walk in and buy them “off the rack”. They are generally no alterations as they are readily available in several size options. While they are not made specifically for individual customers, great care is taken while following fashion forecasts and in the choice and cut of the fabric. Ready-to-wear collections are usually presented by fashion houses each season during a period known as Fashion Week. This takes place on a city-wide basis and occurs twice a year.

3.8 Mass Produced

Currently the fashion industry relies more on mass market sales. The mass market caters for a wide range of customers, producing ready-to-wear clothes in large quantities and standard sizes. Cheap materials creatively used, produce affordable fashion. Mass market designers generally adapt the trends set by the famous names in fashion. They often wait around a season to make sure a style is going to catch on before producing their own versions of the original look. The end product can therefore be sold much more affordably. The downside of mass fashion is that fashion leaders will be following new trends by then.

3.9 Areas of Fashion Design

Many professional fashion designers start off by specializing in a particular area of fashion. The smaller and the more specific the market, the more likely a company is to get the right look and feel to their clothes. It is also easier to establish oneself in the fashion industry if a company establishes a brand image. Once a fashion company becomes established (that is, has regular buyers and is well-known by both the trade and the public), it may decide to expand into a new area. If the firm has made a name for the clothes it already produces, this helps to sell the new line. It is usually safest for a company to expand into an area similar to the one it already knows. For example, a designer of women's sportswear might expand into men's sportswear.

3.10 Growth of Fashion Scenario in the Indian market

Fashion industry in India is now developing rapidly due to the constant support of the Ministry of Textiles. The scenario is encouraging and with every passing year new designers/fashion professionals are arriving on the fashion scene. It may be in the world of modelling, designing, photography or trend forecasting. Indian designers are opening new horizons, setting fresh goals and are now proving their mettle on the ramp and the apparel industry in India. Textile and Apparel industry is the second largest industry in India and employing more than 4 million people. India is the 4th largest apparel supplier to the world. The Indian Retail Industry is growing at an impressive rate.

3.11 How Can The Army Institute of Fashion & Design Fill The Gap ?

Though, in the last decade, competition has been tough, India has shown considerable progress in the field of Fashion & Design. Fashion Designers such as Rajesh Pratap Singh, Raghavendra Rathore, Ritu Kumar, Rohit Bal, Tarun Tahiliani, J.J Valaya, Shane and Falguni Peacock, Manish Malhotra and Manish Arora have already made their presence felt at the international level.

Fashion is not just about being creative, but is also a technical field. It is also imperative that the designer is finely tuned into the needs of a market whether prêt or haute couture.
