

YOUNG RESEARCHERS FOR SOCIAL IMPACT

Conducted by Young Leaders for Active Citizenship (YLAC), the Young Researchers for Social Impact program is a highly selective engagement that identifies promising high schoolers and builds their capacity as critical thinkers and problem solvers to produce thought-provoking solutions to pressing issues that affect our societies today. The program provides students a platform to develop their skills in research and advocacy, interact with thought leaders, gain diverse perspectives and create social impact by working directly on live projects for partner organizations.
