hellogreetings of the day!! want a secure and stable career but i hardly find anything very secure or stable or well paid jobs after attaining a degree in political science, though i have interest in the subject but i am not very passionate about it I have the option of doing MA in political science, but i don't have very much interest in something revolving entirely out of political science.I have been the headboy of my school and i guess i am pretty good at leadership roles & management.To make career more secure and stable, i was wondering to switch from ba to Mba in post grad, a)what are the pros and cons if i consider this option?b) is it fruitful to switch stream after graduation?c) does MBA make my career more stable?d) what are the good fields if we combine political science and something of commerce?
