

Singapore Universities details:

Singapore is a very good destination to study and National University of Singapore (NUS) and NTU are considered to be the best universities to pursue your under graduation course.

Admission in both the universities is highly competitive as they are not only one of the best universities in South East Asia, but also one of the best in the world for undergraduate and postgraduate studies.

The application process starts in October and continues until March/February every year for students from the CBSE student. By end of May, the Universities short list and inform the candidates for a personal interview. Application selection is mainly based on academic credentials and final admission is based only on interview performance.

Since Singapore university admissions are highly competitive, you should aim for nothing less than 95% marks in your class 12 board examinations. Other factors which play an important role for application selection are –

Consistently excellent performance throughout the academic period

IELTS score of 7.0 band

Exceptional talent and achievements

Participation in Extracurricular activities

Outstanding Achievements

While academic merit plays a key role in deciding the outcome of your application, we also consider exceptional achievements in co-curricular activities and competitions. You must have attained a very high level of achievement or leadership positions in activities. Examples of such achievements include International Science Olympiad medals, top national awards, national team sportsmen and exceptional rank in top university entrance examinations (e.g. IIT/AIEEE rankings, etc.).

Participation in activities and achievements at intra school, house or class level (e.g. best student, most courteous, science/arts/cultural projects, etc.) do not, usually, have a strong bearing on the outcome of your application.
