

Your Personality

Your personality type is ENTJ:

Introversion (I) vs. Extraversion (E)

How we interact with the world and where we direct our energy.

Introversion

- Focus attention inward
- Enjoy tasks that require concentration
- Work best on one project at a time
- Work at a careful, steady pace
- Consider things fully before speaking

Extraversion

- Focus attention outward
- Enjoy a variety of tasks
- Seek out and need other people
- Work at a rapid pace
- Need to talk through their ideas

Sensing (S) vs iNtuition (N)

What kind of information we naturally focus on and remember.

Sensing

- Focus on "what is"
- Like working with what can be seen and touched
- Apply past experience to solving problems
- Need specific and realistic directions

iNtuition

- Focus on "what could be"
- Enjoy theory and speculation
- Like thinking about the future and possibilities
- Need to use their imagination

Thinking (T) vs. Feeling (F)

Make decisions logically and impersonally, or use personal values.

Thinking

- Are motivated by achievement
- Enjoy analyzing problems logically
- Make fair and unbiased decisions
- Need to weigh the pros and cons to make decisions
- Can be tough negotiators

Feeling

- Work towards completing their responsibilities before relaxing
- Like to maintain control of their projects

Perceiving

- Enjoy flexible and changing work situations
- Like to be able to respond to problems as they arise
- Are more satisfied with fewer rules and procedures
- Need to have fun in their work

Your Personality Profile

Confident and assertive, you speak your mind and always seem to be sure of yourself. While honest and fair, you are also quite outspoken. You have strong opinions and are usually able to convince others that your position is right.

Friendly and comfortable being the center of attention, you probably have a large group of friends. People admire your determination and willingness to push yourself to achieve your very high standards.

A creative person who asks thought-provoking questions, you love to learn but are bored by repetition. You need constant new challenges to remain interested. You are imaginative and like to look beyond everyday routine to really understand why the world operates as it does.

Decisive and organized, you like to be prepared at all times and may find it difficult or embarrassing to try improvising. You like to be in charge, but sometimes take over projects that aren't really yours. You are frustrated by inefficiency and find illogical rules infuriating.

You want to be good at everything you try. You especially like to demonstrate your competence to others. People look to you as a natural leader and are often impressed with your knowledge. Others respect you and feel comfortable giving you a lot of responsibility.

	e following recommendations are based on your results. est for you.	Consider each and select the ones you think would work
Fo	or Learning Activities
	Driven to achieve, you work hard to learn and do things correctly, and love to master new subjects. You learn best by starting out with a broad view of an issue or idea, then examining the theories and assumptions relating to it. Seek out opportunities to study complex systems and future possibilities, and to apply your creativity and insight to solving problems.
	Organized and analytical, you like information to be presented in an orderly and logical manner. You excel at learning through traditional methods, such as reading and lectures, and like to have access to the most current information available.
	You dislike repetition and routine. Ask your instructor if you can use different methods to complete your assignments. Be prepared to suggest some alternatives. For example, perhaps you could give a presentation or debate an issue instead of writing a paper. If a specific method is required, ask for the reasons why. A logical explanation that makes sense to you can help to make it more acceptable.
	If you don't find your learning material engaging, try to spark your curiosity by discussing the subject matter with experts or reading related articles. Look for ways in which the subject connects to topics you have more interest in. Organize the information in a chart or diagram to make it easier to memorize. View the assignment as a problem to be solved and challenge yourself to beat the deadline.
	You learn by questioning, discussing, debating and leading others. While you may need time on your own at first to consider an idea, you refine it through energetic discussion and analysis with others. You like to show people what you know, so think of ways to share your knowledge. Take part in presentations, discussions, debates and competitions. Ask questions in class. Tutor people in a topic you know well. Form a study group or set up projects that you can lead.
	If you're having trouble figuring out a solution to a prob something completely different. Sometimes it can help	em and are growing frustrated, take a break and focus on to concentrate on something else for a while.
Fo	or Learning Environments
	Seek out a well-respected, academically challenging pro and top-rated teaching staff. Look for knowledgeable in difficult questions as part of your learning.	ogram with high standards, a good student-to-faculty ratio structors who will encourage you to probe, test and ask
	Your ideal learning environment is an engaging setting that encourages innovation, achievement and original thinking. You like to be surrounded by high achievers like yourself with similar goals and standards. Look for opportunities to develop your leadership ability, distinguish yourself and stand out from your peers.
	Take advantage of internships, research initiatives and v	vork-study programs where you can test your ideas and practice your leadership skills.

While you may not think you have time for extracurricular activities, taking a break from your studies can provide stress relief and add balance to your life. You may enjoy attending athletics competitions or campus cultural activities. You can also get involved in clubs and organizations that provide opportunities to practice your debate and leadership skills. If you can't find a club that interests you, start one of your own.

Recommendations  The following recommendations are based on your results. Consider each and select the ones you think would work best for you.
For Sending and Receiving Communication  Outgoing, well-spoken and self-assured, you are good at expressing information clearly and convincingly. You may also use gestures — body language — very effectively to make your point. Use your strengths to demonstrate your competence and knowledge. With your people skills, passion for ideas and eloquence, you excel at winning people over to your way of thinking.
You probably enjoy debate and are very good at it. Be aware that your strong personality and habit of challenging others can be overwhelming for some people. They may feel intimidated, embarrassed or defensive when they're or the receiving end of a barrage of difficult questions or arguments. If you sense that someone has been offended, try using a more diplomatic approach.
Understand that some people may have a different communication style from yours. For example, some may need time to reflect before responding. Others may be more emotional types who address things in terms of their feelings. This doesn't make their ideas any less valid or important. Be patient and give people a chance to express their thoughts in the way that's most natural for them.
As an energetic and powerful speaker, you may be so intent on making your point that you neglect to listen properly. Practice using active listening skills. Focus on what the other person is saying, make eye contact, nod or gesture, and watch their body language for non-verbal cues. Don't interrupt. When they've finished speaking, ask questions and rephrase what they've said to check that your understanding is accurate.

For Interacting with Others
You work well with like-minded team members, but may get annoyed with people whose goals, standards or work habits differ from yours. Recognize that everyone brings value to a team, even if their views or talents are different from your own. In fact, a more diverse group can be stronger due to their greater breadth of skills. Learn about each person's unique skillset and focus on making the best use of them.  Use your ability to teach others. A high achiever yourself, you may enjoy helping others to achieve their goals too. You could offer to mentor team members who need training or skill development in one of your areas of expertise, for example.
Consider others' perspectives. Pushing the team to accept your decisions can make you look bossy and lead to resentment. Explain your point of view in clear, persuasive, practical terms. Give equal time to the others, listen carefully, and weigh the pros and cons. Find a way to incorporate the best aspects of their ideas with the best of your own. In this way, everyone can feel like they have been involved in the process.
Make a point of providing encouragement and positive feedback to your colleagues. Remember that some people are more productive when they are praised for their efforts. Also, give extra consideration to people's feelings when providing constructive criticism. Keep your tone positive and explain clearly that this is about the problematic issue or behavior, not the person. Think about how to convey your message with tact and thoughtfulness.
	Use your networking skills to connect with other professionals. Networks should be mutually beneficial, so think about how you can help your contacts as well as how they can help you.
