Your Personality Profile

Quiet, realistic and practical, you communicate in a style that is clear, simple and direct. A careful observer, you notice details that interest or relate to you and have a good memory for past experiences. You think things through before sharing your insights and are cautious about change. Responsible and steady, you strive to do your best in every situation.

Conscientious and logical, you like to make sensible decisions and keep things orderly and efficient. Organized and productive, you have a great ability to concentrate and get things done. You set high standards for yourself and for others, like to be judged on your merits, and are fair and consistent when dealing with other people. You take your commitments seriously and prefer people who are genuine and reasonable.

You trust proven facts and experience and tend to be skeptical of untested ways. Patient and willing to wait, you may miss opportunities if you hesitate too long. You may focus too intently on tiny details and lose sight of the larger context or purpose.

When you can't see a way out of a bad situation, you may become discouraged. A very private person, you're generally not inclined to share your feelings or reactions. You like to be prepared and tend to dislike surprises, change and uncertainty.

You value order and stability and can be somewhat inflexible due to your strong sense of right and wrong. You may insist that others conform to your way of doing things and resist trying other, less conventional, methods.

Because of your calm and cool exterior, you may appear indifferent to what's going on around you. You don't usually share information about yourself or your views unless asked directly by people with whom you are comfortable.

Recommendations

The following recommendations are based on your results. Consider each and select the ones you think would work best for you.

For Interacting with Others

You prefer to work independently because you can rely on yourself to ensure a task is completed properly and on time. At times, however, it is necessary or helpful to work with other people. Recognize that they have abilities you lack. Try to appreciate the unique set of skills that each person brings to the group and discover how to make the best use of them. Sometimes you can accomplish much more as a team than you can on your own.
Work on your ability to understand and work with people you consider disruptive, irresponsible or uncooperative. Get to know them better on a personal level and learn what motivates them in their professional capacity. Greater understanding can lead to a more productive collaboration.
Make a point of noting others' achievements and providing positive feedback to your team on a regular basis. Many people like their work to be noticed and appreciated, and are more productive if praised for their efforts. While you may sincerely appreciate the great work done by the people around you, they need to hear it.
Understand that some people are more emotional types, and less driven by logic and reason than you. It can be difficult for these people to relate in purely a business or impersonal manner. For them, establishing a personal rapport is critical to a good working relationship.
As a leader, you are driven to meet your organization's goals. To aid the group's success, provide a clear, well-organized plan outlining the objectives, along with expectations for each team member. Be sensitive to people's needs, ensure they have the tools and information to do their work, and remember to acknowledge their accomplishments along the way.
